We are building a movement for media that brings people together. And you can own it.

Inequality is rising, our climate is changing and nationalist leaders are gaining ground. To handle what's coming we need knowledge - not click bait. But fake news and media monopolies are spreading misinformation. And all the while, the challenges of the information age are making it harder than ever for independent media like us to survive.

For the past 44 years, we have published stories that make sense of the complex and beautiful world we live in and offer bold, bright ideas for how to change things. This is journalism that has the power to bring people together. As we print our 500th edition, we are opening up the very core of our organisation by inviting YOU to join us as co-owners. The funds we raise will help us to get our stories out to more people than ever before.

We're launching the Local Public Ownership Awards, in partnership with Local Gov, because we know that so many councils around the country are doing a fantastic job of running services directly.

Councils are under a huge amount of pressure, yet many are being brave by bringing services in house and trying out innovative new public ownership. Sometimes they are up against naysayers who believe the myths about privatisation being better - despite all the evidence that it's not.

Think of Robin Hood Energy in Nottingham, Liverpool taking control of recycling or Buckinghamshire bringing social workers in house.

Let's celebrate councils doing public ownership and leading the way. With your help, we can support them and fight back against ideology.
